Art Unit: 1745

Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Claims 1, 2, 4 and 10 are confusing because they imply that a (single) gasket includes two gaskets and a print circuit. Is the "gasket" the overall structure or a part thereof? Claims 3, 5 and 6 are drawn to a gasket, but do not recite any member which would act as a gasket. In claims 5 and 6, whether anything other than the "detecting portion" must be present is unclear. Claims 7-9 are unclear as to whether the "gasket" the overall structure or a part thereof.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Glover (US 6,242,690).

Glover discloses a printed circuit board (12), with gaskets (22, 36) located on both sides thereof. While Glover does not specifically mention that the board is flexible, all elongated solid objects are able to flex to some degree. Thus, the board would be a flexible circuit. These claims would thus be anticipated, to the extent that they are understood.

Claims 5 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by McLean et al. (GB 2,339,060).

McLean et al. disclose a fuel cell which includes separators (20) in the form of printed circuits (page 14, lines 11-16) which include conductive traces (37, 38). These would each be the same thing as the present "detecting portion". These claims would thus be anticipated, to the extent that they are understood.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Genc et al. (US 6,410,176) disclose a fuel cell stack connected to a circuit board.

The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: Figure 5 is not specifically mentioned in the Detailed Description section of the specification, called "best mode" by applicants. Appropriate correction is required.

The preliminary amendment of 2/25/02 is noted.
